Do men or women have bigger egos? - CNN.com.au

A big ego, which includes high self-confidence and realistic expectations, is generally healthy (perhaps annoying, but healthy none-the-less). Narcissism involves exaggerated self-confidence, an inflated view of one's abilities and unrealistic expectations of themselves and others. A big ego is not a bad thing.

Big Ego vs Narcissism? How to Tell the Difference

Men with big egos sometimes view their relationships with women as an opportunity to show off. They may pick the typical trophy partner that they can show off to others in an effort to feel superior. They are also prone to cheating since having multiple partners insulates them from having to worry about dealing with a loss of ego during a breakup.
