Harold Lasswell defined politics as "who gets what, when and how" and this definition of politics has encapsulated political behaviour around the world, with politicians being driven by political positions, resource distribution and out-competing their competitors. This has led to much political apathy around the world, along with the corporatization of the state, with vested interests penetrating political systems and having a large say over policy and legislation formulations.

In the 1930s, Harold Lasswell reputedly defined politics as a competition about who gets what, when, and how. The core of politics in developed democratic countries rivets around the money – around the rate of taxation and utilization of collected money. Since the Second World War, we have witnessed a steady rise in the volume of resources countries collect from their citizens through the levied taxes.

Politics is truly as simply as Lasswell's title. Perhaps most intriguing is Lasswell's ability to incorporate the analogs of major (and minor) historical events into his political theory. He engages events ranging from the Civil War to the French Revolution. Thus, Lasswell integrates politics into history, and history into politics.
